FRIDAY, - NOVEMBER 14, 1890.

Attorney General Miller has decided that advertisements of "guessing contests" are not in violation of the anti-lottery law and can pass through the mails.

Senator Quay is to resign from the Chairmanship of the National Republican Committee at an early day and will be succeeded by Clarkson, of Iowa.

The 77th birthday of Hon. A. G. Thurman was celebrated at Columbus, O., last night with a grand banquet. Toasts were responded to by Messrs. Waterson, Carlisle and Breckenridge, of this State.

The Nashville American says the Davidson county delegation will push the claims of Hon. Allen G. Hall for the Speakership of the next Tennessee Legislature. Go in Allen, your native county of Christian is for you.

Another revolution has broken out in the Republic of Guatemala, in Central America, and the President has been driven from the capital, but is collecting a force and will attempt to recapture the Government.

The damage suits of Zeb Ward and Scott Newman against the Louisville Post have been continued till spring at the cost of the plaintiffs. The Post is anxious for a trial and is confident of proving all it charged about the granite contract steal.

The unsettled condition of stocks on Wall street this week caused the collapse of several well-known firms of brokers, among them being Decker, Howell & Co., C. M. Whitney & Co., Walker & Son of New York and Narr & Friend, of Philadelphia. The worst was believed to be over yesterday.

Of the 332 members of the next Congress, 331 have been elected. The remaining member yet to be elected in Rhode Island is conceded to the Republicans, which will make the House stand 242 Democrats and 90 Republicans. In the list of Democrats are included 38 Alliance men. All but eight of those elected by combining with the Democrats. Five in Kansas, one in Minnesota and two in Nebraska were elected over both parties in triangular races.

The Tobacco Grower's Convention at Lexington this week is largely attended. The principal subject of discussion will be the big warehouse combine, finally consummated Tuesday. The farmers almost to a man are opposed to the consolidation of all the warehouses of Louisville and Cincinnati under one management. They claim that it will destroy the price of tobacco, monopolize the trade and leave the growers with nothing to say about their crops. It is probable that Union warehouses will be opened in all the principal markets, to "buck against" the combine.

After all, South Dakota shows up in good shape. The official count in all the counties were made Tuesday and the corrected returns show that the Democrats and Alliance men have at least 7 majority on joint ballot over the Republicans. The majority against the Republicans will be 4 in the House and 3 in the Senate. This insures the defeat of Senator Moody and makes a gain of five Senators sure and the New Hampshire Senatorship still in doubt. If Blair is defeated in New Hampshire by a Democrat, the Senate after March 4 1891 will stand 45 Republicans 41 Democrats and 2 Alliance men from Kansas and South Dakota.

The Frankfort correspondents of the Louisville papers have announced two new candidates for Governor this week. One of these is Dr. J. D. Clardy, of Christian, and the other is Col. C. M. Clay, Jr., of Bourbon county. Both will run as farmers' candidates, but inside the Democratic party lines. The only other candidate is Hon. John Young Brown, of Henderson, Gov. Bryan having declined to enter the race. Unless Gen. Hardin, or some other Central or Eastern Kentucky man should enter the race, Clay will go into the canvass with decided geographical advantages and will certainly be one of the contending men on the last ballot.

An honest Swede tells his story in plain but unmistakable language for the benefit of the public. "One of my children took a cold and got the croup. I gave her a teaspoonful of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and in five minutes later I gave her one more. By this time she had coughed up the gathering in her throat. Then she went to sleep and slept good for fifteen minutes. Then she got up and vomited; she went back to bed and slept good for the remainder of the night. She got the croup the second night and I gave the same remedy with the same good results. Write this because I thought there might be some one in the same need and not know the true merits of this wonderful medicine." CHARLES A. LARSEN, Des Moines, Iowa. 50 cent bottles for sale by Buckner Leavelle.

The Farmers' Convention.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 11.—The Kentucky Farmers met here in State Convention at the Opera House at 10 o'clock this morning.

Rev. W. H. Felix, of the Baptist Church, this city, offered prayer, and Hon. Mitchell Alford, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, made the welcoming address. He talked very encouragingly about the prospects of the farmers, and while he did not make an out-and-out bid for their support, he gave them to understand he was their friend.

Benjamin Terrell, of Texas, the national Lecturer for the Farmers' Alliance, responded to Mr. Alford's address in a happy style. He also showed how rapidly the farmer's movement is growing, and while it is not the object of the Alliance to meddle with local affairs, the speaker said it would take a hand in national elections. He is sanguine enough to think the Alliance will make itself distinctly felt in '92.

S. B. Erwin, of Bowling Green, the President of the Kentucky State Farmers' Union, then made a neat speech setting forth the aims of the Association. The convention then adjourned till 1 o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 o'clock a secret session met in the court-house. No one was admitted except the delegates, who gave the pass word before entering.

At 6:30 o'clock a good address was delivered by E. K. Shultz, of Bowling Green, which was largely attended by the citizens generally.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 12.—The Farmers' and Laborers' Union was called to order at 8:30 o'clock this morning by President Erwin. After the singing of an ode, Rev. Demoss, of Hopkins county, asked the Divine blessing to rest upon the convention, and the routine business was begun. At 9:30 o'clock the session adjourned to attend the Tobacco Growers' Convention. The Alliance men will favor building warehouses in opposition to the tobacco combine.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a called meeting of Pembroke Lodge, No. 288, F. and A. M., the Worshipful Master announced the death of Bro. Chas. J. Radford, M. M., who died Nov. 5, 1890, and appointed a committee to draft resolutions of respect and condolence, the following were offered and unanimously approved:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Supreme Grand Master to call from labor to refreshment, our dearly beloved brother, Chas. J. Radford.

Resolved, 1st, That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him, who doeth all things well.

2nd, That by the death of brother Radford, this lodge has been deprived of a most valuable and useful member, one who, in young manhood became imbued with the spirit of our mystic brotherhood, and in the plenitude of his powers still loved and fostered our craft.

3rd, That while we greatly deplore his untimely end, we trust that his disembodied spirit has entered the "Celestial Lodge above where the Supreme Architect of the universe presides."

4th, That this community has lost a true and honorable citizen, a kind neighbor and friend, his family a most loving husband and affectionate father.

5th, That we deeply sympathize with his weeping wife and orphaned children in their time of sorrow, and commend them to the God of the widow and fatherless, who alone can comfort and soothe their bleeding hearts.

6th, That these proceedings be spread upon the minutes of the lodge, furnished Hopkinsville papers for publication, and a copy sent the family of our deceased brother.

7th, That we wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolutions.

On last Friday, Nov. 7, at the regular monthly meeting of the Hopkinsville Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. church, South, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in the all-wise dispensation of His divine will to remove from our midst one of our number, our dearly beloved sister, Mrs. G. V. Thompson.

And while we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society, are deeply grieved at this loss, yet would we bow submissively to the will of Him-whose province it is to watch over the fall of the sparrow. We feel that we shall miss the gentle, loving influence of our departed friend, and we have therefore:

Resolved, That in the death of Sister Thompson our Society has sustained a great loss, the Church has been deprived of one of its sincerest christian women, and her family of a devoted wife and mother.

Resolved, That she has left us an example of christian character we would be wise to imitate; she was indeed a follower of the "meek and lowly Jesus."

Resolved, That to the bereaved family we extend our heartfelt sympathies in this great affliction, and in christian love we commend them to "Him who doeth all things well."

Resolved, That in token of our great love for our deceased sister, we spread these resolutions on the records of our Society and send a copy of the same to the family.

CATARRH.

Zot Local, But Constitutional.

Dr. Dio Lewis, the eminent Boston physician in a recent magazine article says: "A radical error underlies nearly all medical treatment of catarrh. * * It is not a disease of the man's nose; it is a disease of the man, showing itself in the nose—a local exhibition of a constitutional trouble." Therefore, he argues, the use of snuff and other local applications is wrong, and while they seem to give temporary relief, they really do more harm than good. Other leading authorities agree with Dr. Lewis. Hence the only proper method of cure for catarrh is by taking a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, reaching every part of the body through the blood, does eliminate all impurities and makes the whole man healthier. It removes the cause of the trouble and restores the diseased membrane to proper condition. That this is the practical result is proven by thousands of people who have been cured of catarrh by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Why to Select the Best.

Physicians claim that pure Sarsaparilla taken in moderation is beneficial to one's health. Kentucky is noted for its pure Sarsaparilla. Keys and while there are quite a number of good brands on the market, the old Sarsaparilla of which Las Simon & Co., of Louisville, Ky., are the Sole Proprietors, is especially recommended for its medicinal qualities.

NAVAL SALUTES.

How a Costly and Hilarious Custom Operated in the South Pacific.

Many laughable stories have been told by officers of the navy concerning the complications that have naturally arisen from the indiscriminate manner in which salutes are fired from vessels of the United States navy and concerning the expense of which there is considerable complaint. "Several years ago," said an officer recently aboard the Galena, "I was down in the South Pacific on the old Quinlan. The Admiral was aboard, and he was precise in matters of etiquette, more particularly in the matter of maintaining the dignity of the service by the indiscriminate firing of salutes in honor of every little nigger King we came across. One day we went into the harbor of Fong Tonga, and the Quartermaster, who had his glass on the shore, announced that there was a fact on the bluff. Thereupon the Admiral ordered a salute of twenty-one guns, and the popping began. Hardly had the first gun sent its echoes across the water when the whole population of the island turned out to see what was going on. At first they were frightened, and then, finding that there was no harm, they came forward in a body. The Admiral's fears gave way to wild delight. They hadn't had such fun since they roasted their last missionary."

The shore runs very flat from the mountains down in those archipelagos, and so we could look right across the beach and see what was going on. We could see the natives dancing and scampering about in great glee, and then we saw the King coming down through the grove, surrounded by an excited retinue of his subjects. This was in the day, when German colonization had just begun, and we discovered as we drew nearer the island that the fort was little more than an embankment surrounded by two old smooth-bore muzzle-loaders that a fierce white-eyed ally had presented to His Royal Highness.

"Finally, the King ordered that our salute be returned, and the army, consisting of five negroes in red cavalry jackets, high boots, and feathered helmets, manned the guns. It took fifteen minutes to load, and meanwhile all the inhabitants had gathered round to see the show. At last the army made ready to fire one of the guns. The loading, which was fully twenty feet long, was run through a knot hole in the fence just behind and stretched to its full length. The army hid itself behind trees; there was a roar, the old gun roared upon its hind trunions and fell with a crash, people called with delight, and the King waved his bright green cape excitedly over his head. The army, proud of its achievement, then came down to the beach and drank the milk out of several coconuts."

"In an hour they enabled out the gun with a bunch of leaves, loaded her, and lugged away again with the same result. Then there was silence. The people stopped yelling, the army left the guns, and pretty soon we saw the King coming up in a white boat, with his three chocolate-colored daughters."

"How are you getting along with your trade, William?" asked his uncle, who visited the shore. "Rather slow," responded William. "Been at it nearly six weeks, and don't know any more about the business than the boys."

FISHES AS FATHERS.

Dutiful Husbands of the Finny Tribe Who Rear Their Offspring.

If you want a perfect model of domestic virtue, where can you find it in higher perfection than in that exemplary and devoted father, the common great pipe-fish of the North Atlantic and the British Sea? The high-principled pipe-fish is so careful of his young, all holiness both in his carries about the unattached eggs with him under his own tail, in what scientific ichthyologists pleasantly describe as a subcaudal pouch or cutaneous receptacle.

There they hatch out in perfect security, free from the dangers that beset the spawn and fry of so many other less tender-hearted kinds; and as soon as the little pipe-fish are big enough to look after themselves, the sea divides continuously down the middle, and allows them to escape, to shift for themselves in the broad Atlantic. Even so, however, the juniors take care always to keep tolerably near that friendly shelter, and creep back into it again on any further occasion, and so the pipe-fish kangaroos do into their mother's marsupium.

The father-fish, in fact, has gone to the trouble and expense of developing out of his own tissues a membranous bag on purpose to hold the eggs and young during the first stages of their embryonic evolution. This bag is formed by two folds of the skin, one of which grows out from each side of the body, the free margins being firmly joined together in the middle by a natural exudation while the eggs are undergoing incubation, but opening once more in the middle to let the little fish out as soon as the process of hatching is fairly finished.

So curious a provision for the safety of the young in the pipe-fish may be compared to some extent with the pouch in which kangaroos and other marsupial animals carry their cubs after birth till they have attained an age of complete independence. But the strange part of it all is the fact that while in the kangaroo it is the mother who owns the pouch and takes care of the young, in the pipe-fish it is the father, on the contrary, who thus specially provides for the safety of his developing offspring. This temporary arrangement is the common rule throughout the class of fishes.

There is a paternally-minded group of catfish known as the genus Arius, of Ceylon, Australia, and other tropical parts, the males of which carry about the ova loose in their mouths, or rather in an enlargement of the pharynx, somewhat resembling the pelican's pouch; and the spouses of these very devoted sires lay accordingly only very few ova, all told, but each almost as big as a hedge-sparrow's egg—a wonderful contrast to the tiny mites of the codfish.

A fresh-water species of the sea of Galilee, known as Andrew by name (dedicated by science to the memory of that fisherman apostle, St. Andrew, who must often have nattered them), has the same habit of hatching out its young in its own gullet. Here again it is the male fish upon whom this apparently maternal duty devolves, just as it is the male caryax that sits upon the eggs of his unnatural mate, and the male eel locks on superciliously and contents himself with exercising a general friendly supervision of the nursery department. In most fish families the eggs are fertilized after they have been laid, instead of before, which, no doubt, accounts for the seeming anomaly.—N. Y. Journal.

VANQUISHED THE WOLF.

Strategy Helps a Maine Woman Out of a Perilous Predicament.

One day Uncle Jonas' two cows disappeared from the opening in the woods about his lonely home, and no traces of them could be traced. Aunt Molly, as his wife was called, started to hunt them up next morning, as the men of the family were away. Leaving the children and going in a westerly direction she wandered throughout the day in the dark, without food, without a mouthful to eat except a few spruce-buds and dried berries, with an occasional handful of ground-nuts, which grew in great abundance on the lowlands.

The sun was fast sinking, when, to her great joy, she discovered the lost cows quietly grazing on a small grassy plain near a brook, some four miles from home. With all possible haste she drove them along, hoping to reach home before dark, and as this was no guess, not even spotted trees, she had to trust wholly to the instinct of the beasts.

Their course once seemed to her exactly the opposite to the right, still her practical knowledge taught her to keep on. When near what is now known as the Wolf House, on a ridge covered by a growth of gigantic pine, both cows gave a loud bellow, as if from fright, and broke into a furious gallop in the direction of home, now half a mile distant. Passing beneath the cause of their fright, she was confronted by a wolf.

The wolf at once made a spring for her face, no doubt intending to grab her throat. With the skill and fury of an expert boxer, Aunt Molly dealt him a stunning blow with her head, and he reeled back, which sent him back upon his haunches. Again and again the starving brute leaped for her throat, but each time was met by both fists and feet with sufficient force to send him back several feet. Knowing it was now life or death, the heroic woman found herself fast growing weaker, while the attacks of her savage adversary grew more fierce.

Snatching her tattered shawl from her head, with a desperate leap she threw it over the head of the wolf with a dexterity which was not only surprising to the wolf, but herself also.

This piece of strategy had the effect to bewilder the wolf. He leaped wildly about, vainly endeavoring to rid himself of his inconvenient headgear, while Molly lost no time in climbing to the lower branches of a tree and out of harm's reach. When the wolf had rid himself of his temporary blindfold and sufficiently recovered his equilibrium, seeing his intended victim beyond his reach, at once set up the most demoniac howls of rage and disappointment, occasionally venting his spleen by furious attacks upon the trunk of the tree and tearing the rough bark with his long crooked fangs.

Here she remained until the return of day, when the wolf slunk away in the direction of the river. As soon as she thought him at a safe distance Molly, nearly faint with hunger, by bold, hasty down and sped for home as fast as the condition of her cramped limbs and chilled frame would permit.
